YOUTH. . . .

The pattern of young as well as youthful leadership emerges complete in the urban renewal committee named to advise on the downtown mall - park area-street-sidewalk modernization (to make it as interesting as it is).

Even two students from Yoe High School are on the committee. The average age probably is about 30.

This is the natural result of 10 years of young leadership in everything from libraries to hospitals to school boards to city officials to various committees and boards like the Cameron Industrial Foundation, Folk Fete, etal.

The record is clear. Combination of youthful thinking experience and young drive has worked time and again for Cameron, a town founded in 1846 in a county opened up as the Milam Land District (or some such) in the 1830s. Youthful leadership is to be found in every federal agency in the community, throughout the Cameron Schools and most of the other districts in the county.

The results are what you would expect. Projects have been undertaken and accomplished when "wisdom" would know they could not be done.

They are done. And that is why it is going to be interesting to see the result of this committee's work on the rejuvenation and design of mall, streets, sidewalks and whatever else needs to be done.

This is Cameron's response to whatever claim there has been of a "generation gap". The gap that has been filled by these and others during the past decade was left when most of a generation of Milam Countians never came back from World War II. They went somewhere else, often to Texas cities.

This gap was not unique to Cameron. Most towns this size particularly in the agriculture belt running north to Canada through the Midwest lost population. Towns under 5,000 have been most vulnerable in the past generation. Cameron is only one.

The unique thing here is the response of youth given their head and a whole cityful of problems, not to mention the drastic demands of modern agri-business.

Through all this Cameron is expanding its still identifiable trade area; it is drawing interest of other cities many times its size because these unique things continue to happen; it is sustaining cognizance of a relationship between healthy agriculture and industry, a balance of community nature which integrates interests and reduces conflict.

Downtown Cameron will not only be new, but it will be young, because young minds will help make it that way. And considering the times in which we live, it is a movement of tomorrow today.

IS IT HOLLOW? A. W. McCullin Sr. uses pick to chip cement from the old opera house - auditorium cornerstone. The stone was placed by "The Young Men's Business League" a forerunner of the modern day Chamer of Commerce. Date on the stone is June 14, 1899. The old building later became a hotel, and has been demolished as part of the city's urban renewal project.

Development Seminar Set

A community development seminar is scheduled to be held in Cameron on Wednesday, February 9. Hosting the seminar are the Cameron Chamber of Commerce, the Cameron Industrial Foundation, and Eugene Black, community economic development, Small Business Administration.

Some of the topics to be discussed will be: creating jobs through new industry and expanding present business; planning for growth; financing and setting goals for the county.

The program will consist of lectures, slides, movies and workshop type conferences designed to acquaint local community and business leaders with the newest development planning techniques.

The entire agenda is designed to emphasize federal, state, local and private assistance in sound economic development of any community.

The program will include representatives from the Small Business Administration, Texas Department of Community Affairs, Texas Industrial Commission, Texas Power & Light Company, tourist development division of the Texas Highway Department and the Central Texas Council of Governments.

All interested persons in the area are invited to attend this very informative meeting and invitations are being extended to other towns in the vicinity.

The seminar will be held at the Methodist Fellowship Hall, February 9 from 4 p.m. until 9 p.m. A brief social hour will be observed with a meal hosted by the Cameron Chamber and the Cameron Industrial Foundation.

Legislators Await Redistricting Ruling

"We're just as confused as anyone about the situation," Rep. Dan Kubiak said this week when asked about the status of the state redistricting plan.

Kubiak said he, along with most incumbents, have not filed for re-election because they do not know what districts they will have.

A ruling on the redistricting plan is expected later this week, he said.

The plan, challenged in a suit by Sen. Oscar Mauzy, will either be left as is or struck down, Kubiak said. The challenge came because the plan offered single member districts to some cities like Houston, and not to others, including Dallas and San Antonio. The senate redistricting plan was challenged on the grounds that it did not include the one man, one vote order.

A three judge federal court has concluded its hearing on the constitutionality of the house and senate districts drawn last year by the legislative redistricting board composed of Speaker Gus Mutscher, Comptroller Robert Calvert, Atty. Gen. Crawford Martin, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes.

According to the disputed plan, Kubiak's District 36 would include Falls, Milam, and Williamson counties.

POAGE'S DISTRICT

The federal court redistricting order handed down Saturday in Dallas trimmed the edges of Rep. Bob Poage's congressional district but left the heart of the district untouched.

The McLennan - Bell complex will still be at the hub -- and population dominance -- of the 11th district.

The district lost two counties and picked up parts of five new counties, ending up with 17 whole or partial counties in Central Texas.

The counties put in the 11th district by the court are Somervell, Bosque, Hamilton, Mills, Lampasas, Coryell, McLennan, Falls, Bell, Burnet, Williamson, Milam, Burleson, Lee, Limestone, a small portion of southern Brown County and a large portion of northern San Saba County.

The court took away from the 11th Parker and Hood counties.

FIREMEN ANSWER CALLS

The city fire siren broke a silence of some weeks duration Tuesday morning for a grass fire at Hoyte. In the afternoon firemen were called to 3 1/2 West St. to a fire that gutted a frame house.

Westlake Edges Past Yoe, 57-56

By Marilyn Hauk

Westlake edged by the Yoemen 57-56 in a district match. They led from the beginning with 19-14 in the first quarter and a halftime score of 34-29. In the third quarter they led 44-37.

Jackie Chubb was high scorer for the Yoemen with 16 points resulting from 3 field goals and 10 free throws. John Barron gained 12 points with 6 field goals.

Also scoring were Dean Prokisch with 9 points, made by 3 FG and 3 FT; Rock Thweatt with 8 points, made by 3 FG and 2 FT; Pat Schiguit made 6 points with 2 FG and 2 FT; and Will Turner scored 2 FG and 1 FT for 5 points.

The Yoe Junior Varsity rapped the Westlake Junior Varsity 40-29.

Johnson was high scorer for the game with 13 points, the result of 5 field goals and 3 free throws. Hemphill scored 12 points with 4 field goals and 4 free throws. Rickey Sapp made 2 field goals and one free throw for 5 points.

The Freshmen stampeded Westlake 52-19. Willie Bell was high scorer with 10 points made by 4 field goals and 2 free throws. Kopriva and Henry each scored 4 field goals and 2 free throws. Kopriva and Henry each scored 4 field goals for 8 points.

Two Sentenced In District Court

Jimmie Dan Crosby of Coryell County and Rolland Dale Webb of Rogers pleaded guilty to the felony offense of burglary in District Court of Milam County on Friday.

Both were sentenced to serve a term of three years in the Texas Department of Corrections, according to County Atty. John B. Henderson Jr.

Crosby and Webb were accused of the offense of burglary by complaints filed by Sheriff Carl Black charging them with burglarizing the home of Harold Winslow on November 8, 1971. Practically all of the items of personal property belonging to Winslow were recovered after the burglary was discovered.

Both Crosby and Webb have previously served terms in the Texas Department of Corrections at Huntsville, Henderson said.

Party Faces Primary With Funds In Doubt

A three-judge panel of federal jurists that struck down a new law setting maximums for local political candidates' filing fees has left county party chairmen faced with expensive primary elections and no authorized way to finance them. It raised the possibility that no primary elections would be held in some counties of Texas.

The new law which set a maximum filing fee of four per cent of the salary of candidates seeking local offices was ruled unconstitutional last week by U.S. Circuit Court Judge Homer Thornberry of Austin and U.S. District Court Judges Sarah T. Hughes and William M. Taylor Jr. because the fees were assessed primarily to raise funds to pay for primary elections.

Milam County Democratic Chairman Roy Law said "We're as much up in the air as can be. The courts have told us what we cannot do, but not what we can do."

Law said he had not received any official notice of the recent judgement "and we will continue to accept the filing fees until we are notified officially." Filing deadline for the May primary election is 6 p.m. February 7.

Law said the primary election in Milam County will cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $6,000. He said the Tarrant County Democratic chairman is asking for personal contributions to finance that county's election, but doubted that the Milam election could be financed in that way. He said the Legislature had authorized the running of primary elections by volunteer workers, but added "I'm not expecting to be run over by people offering their services on a volunteer basis."

Republican primary elections in Milam County have been run on a volunteer basis in recent years, however voting has been limited to only two boxes. Voting in Democratic primaries in the past has been in 25 county voting precincts.

Law commented that if primary elections were eliminated, all candidates would run in the national election. "If we had 10 candidates for the office of Governor," Law said, "a man receiving only 11 percent of the vote could be elected."

He said there was a possibility that state funds would be made available for party primaries.

Judge Thornberry called on county and state executive committees of the political parties to meet to make new rules for the carrying out of their decision. Law said to date no special meeting had been called, however a pre-scheduled meeting of county Democratic chairmen is set for February 11 - 12 in Austin.

Under previous legislation maximum filing fee for a candidate for the $7,800 office of County Judge would be $1,248. The law also allowed a candidate to file without fee he produced a pauper's affidavit accompanied by a petition of qualified voters.

Red Cross Will Meet At Rockdale

A Red Cross meeting for all of Milam County will be held in the Community Room of the Rockdale State Bank Thursday, January 27 at 7:30 p.m. (tonight).

Jim Burleson, field representative from Fort Worth, will be guest speaker. Everyone interested in any phase of Red Cross activity is urged to attend. For more information contact Miss Betty Jo Lanford in Rockdale.

Apollo Launch Pads Will Go

By Mark Bubb
Reuter Correspondent

CAPE KENNEDY, FA.

The joys and the tragedy experienced on the Saturn I launch pads mean nothing to the men who will buy the multi-million dollar equipment for a mere pittance and sell it for scrap.

Launch pad 34, where three austronauts died in 1967, and where the Apollo manned flights were begun with the mission of Walter Schirra, Donn Eisele and Walter Cunningham in 1968, and Launch pad 37, plus associated equipment have been put on the auction block.

The 75 prospective bidders who visited the launch facilities recently said they were not impressed with the historic value, but ony the current value-mostly in scrap salvage-of the facilities.

Jerry Posen of Cleveland, an owner of Young Posen, Inc., a large demolition firm, said "I'm just trying to figure out what it can be used for. Most of it will have to be scrapped." Historic value, he said, "means nothing to me." he added that it was strictly business.

Sheldon Mandell, president of National Wrecking Co. of Chicago, another large firm, said "The value is strictly nuts and bolts to me. There is a difference between dollars and common sense compared to the heart. If we used the heart all times, there would be no dollars left."

Mandell also complained that the space agency "took all the meat and left only the bones." He referred to the fact that almost all of the electronic equipment has been removed and used elsewhere.

Barney Maltby, chief of the General Services Administration personal property center, at the Kennedy Space Center, said the portion to be sold from the $147 million complex cost the government $68 million. It includes service structures, which were used around the Saturn I rockets, umbilical towers, and a variety of cranes, elevators and other equipment.

How much of the $68 million the government will get back out of the used facilities is questionable. A number of men said, "The government will be lucky to get one buck," pointing out it would take about one half a million dollars to take it down and move it. They considered the large cranes, some capable of lifting 60 tons, of doubtful value for resale. The cranes, they said, were specialized and out of date.

Several men estimated that the entire facilities might bring only about half a million dollars.

Maltby, who refers to himself as the government junk dealer, said he had no idea what bids would be offered. "We have a confidential figure of what we think it should bring." he said. Bids will be opened Feb. 1 and a decision reached on the buyer within less than two weeks.

On the sides of the nearby blockhouse, which are not for sale, there is a list of the launches from each launch pad. The early Saturn two-stage rockets were flight tested from here, some of them carrying the huge winged pegasus spacecraft designed to discover how many micrometeorids would be encountered in earth orbit.

First flights of the unmanned Apollo and lunar module ships were also fired into space from here. And the first manned Apollo was fired into orbit on Oct. 11, 1968, just seven years after the pad was used for the first time.

Only in the memories of Thousands of space workers is listed the tragic fire which cost the lives of Virgil I. Grissom, Edward White and Roger Chaffee on Jan. 27, 1967.

A Working Combination...

We're proud of Cameron and Milam County. Of course, we're supposed to be.

But it doesn't take too long a walk or too distant a drive to see the character of modern development in this area.

The latest is announcement of dams for North Milam and South Falls in Pond Creek Watershed. Another is recent opening of the Bell-Milam-Falls Water System, serving its first 200 members.

Now downtown planning is scheduled in February to outline work on streets, the mall - parking center and other more technical improvement in the nine-block downtown area.

And people now are generating interest in construction of a show barn discussed several years, but tabled for some reason or other.

City of Cameron is enjoying only a 2 percent unemployment rate while the nation's average is 6 percent. That means almost everyone willing and able to work on one of these projects or willing to learn a skill can get a job in the Cameron area.

Alcoa announced a cutback among 13 salaried employees, which is no surprise since their gross income was off by 5 percent, according to latest figures.

But otherwise, this county seems to find empetus in what Cameron is about, and Cameron, in turn, contributes toward the modern agriculture base with the technical leadership officed and residing here.

It is a working combination.

Whole Cities For....

Pond Creek Watershed has been funded for construction of six of 22 dams in the North Milam area. About 40,000 acres are in the Milam control area, the balance of 146,000 acres in South Falls County.

This is the first of two water control areas in the Milam area which will change the face of Central Texas.

Not only will Elm Creek and Pond Creek Watersheds provide flood control which annually curtails hundreds of thousands of dollars loss in fences, crops, roadways and topsoil erosion, the districts will create recreation lakes of various sizes which can double as reservoirs for industrial and municipal use and agriculture irrigation.

Retaining water which rushes out each heavy spring or fall rain is vital to the growth of Central Texas. It is so basic and has been such a loss, we can hardly calculate the value of recreation lakes, water storage and flood control without first seeing what these factors contribute.

Planning on Elm Creek Watershed is about 65 percent complete and will include sites for dams ranging from five acres to perhaps 50 at about 40 points in Milam, Bell, Falls and McLennan Counties.

When all these are built, control of runoff, destructive runoff which tears things up as it flows to the sea, will be more complete. And Central Texas, or this part of it, should realize advantages West Texas would give whole cities for.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Classroom Copycat

Scene: a college classroom. The professor is delivering a lecture on philosophy. Most of his listeners are paying only intermittent attention to his pearls of wisdom.

But one alert young man is zealously taking down every word. For he has a great idea. He will gather the lectures together, publish them in book form, and then sell them to students who are less energetic than he is.

Could the professor block the young man's project if he so desired? This question arose not long ago when a professor actually did go to court against a classroom copycat. He claimed that publication of the lectures would violate his "common law copyright."

The defendant retorted that the professor had lost the copyright by uttering his words in public, thereby making them "free for all."

But the court sided with the professor and granted him an injunction. The court pointed out that he had spoken not to the general public, for general use, but to a limited group for limited use.

Other courts have agreed that a professor does not lose his common law copyright merely by delivering lectures to his students. By the same token, a minister probably retains rights in his sermons after delivering them to his congregation.

However, a copyright generally protects only the mode of expression, not the information itself. For example:

A professor of medicine complained in court that a new book contained certain details about surgery that he had described in his lectures.

But it turned out that the book did not use the professor's language at all—and used his data only in combination with material taken from other sources.

The court decided that the professor had no grounds for complaint. The court said he could not, simply by stating facts out loud, gain a monopoly on those facts for himself.

Federal Court Ruling May Hasten Special Session

Another federal court ruling -- voiding the new political filing fee law -- jarred state officials and posed the possibility of an emergency special legislative session soon.

While an earlier decision invalidating the old filing fee law was still on appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court, three judges in Dallas knocked out a back-up statute passed last year.

If rulings stand, Texas will be without any method of financing its May and June party primary elections. The filing deadline is February 7.

In the original 1970 decision on the old law, fees were declared unconsititutional because they were used for revenue-collecting and were an absolute requirement to get on the ballot.

Legislators in 1971 passed a law effective January 1, 1972, setting maximum filing fees amounting to four per cent of a candidate's term salary. Another provision provided for getting on the ballot by pauper's affidavits of inability to pay, together with a petition signed by 10 per cent of area voters. This, too, was invalidate by a federal court last Thursday.

State is now enjoined from implementing any fee system for financing the primaries.

Gov. Preston Smith and Secretary of State Bob Bullock have expressed hope courts will stay the latest order until the Supreme Court rules on the first case.

Circuit Judge Homer Thornberry advised party county and state executive committees to make new rules for carrying out the latest ruling.

Since there is no authority for state financing of the primaries, a special legislative session apparently would be necessary to provide for that before May. One suggested alternative is voluntary contributions to pay the election bill -- an estimated $1.5 million statewide.

OIL ALLOWABLE

Texas Railroad Commission decided to delay setting the February oil allowable pending further study.

Major purchasers, the commission explained, report inventories are higher than needs, although crude stocks are at a four-year low mark.

Seven of 14 major crude oil purchasers requested a larger oil allowable factor for February. Two requested a small one, and five proposed to keep the January factor of 67.5 per cent of potential. The U. S. Bureau of Mines predicted deman in February would be 3,530,000 barrels a day, or 10,000 less than January.

MARIJUANA PENALTY

Two Texas task forces looking into problems of children and youth in preparation for a White House conference recommended the penalty for first offense possession of limited amounts of marijuana should be reduced.

The groups advised Gov. Preston Smith the penalty should be lowered from felony to misdemeanor status.

A total of 264 recommendations were made to Smith covering 16 areas of exploration by the steering committee.

Other proposals included:

*Mandatory sex education in public schools as early as possible.

*Opposition to capital punishment.

*Repeal of abortion laws.

*State funds for low cost housing.

*Drug education starting with kindergarten or at first grade level.

AG OPINIONS

Texans can claim refunds on part of car sales taxes paid between August 16 and December 10, Att. Gen. Crawford C. Martin held.

Those who get refunds of the federal excise taxes (repealed August 16) can also put in for refunds of the state tax (calculated on the total amount paid for a car) averaging about $8.

I another recent opinion, Martin concluded:

*The BOard of Pardons and Paroles has authority to hire two deputy rules-reviewing deputy compact administrators at $600 a year.

COURTS SPEAK

Court of Criminal Appeals upheld state marijuana laws against attack that they are unconstitutionally vague.

State Supreme Court found The University of Texas at Austin used "undue influence" on a 90-year-old retired professor to get him to leave valuable property to the institution. The decision determined the old professor's home should go to an attorney who signed a $35,000 purchase contract for it, and that his other property, on his death, should go to a nephew.

A February 16 hearing was set by the Supreme Court on a Houston barber's damage suit which involves a claim that freon cans should contain printed warnings they may blow up if attached to the wrong part of an auto air conditioner. The barber was injured when a can exploded as he was attempting to "recharge" his air conditioner.

DEMOCRATS

Just about the time a controversy over party rules appeared to be settled, Democrats found themselves with a leadership dispute on their hands.

State Democratic Executive Committee Chairman Roy Orr of DeSoto accepted appointment as a Dallas County commissioner, setting the stage for the new wrangle.

Secretary of State Bob Bullock said he would not issue a certificate of appointment as a commissioner to Orr until he resigned his SDEC place because election duties of the two offices may prove incompatible.

Orr was quoted as saying he would resign, then that he wouldn't, then that he might in 30 days and again that he wouldn't.

Meanwhile, Gov. Smith asked William R. Anderson Jr. of Corpus Christi to seek the chairmanship. Anderson said he would agree to be a candidate, if and when Orr vacated the job.

RETROACTIVE PAY

State employees and school teachers will receive retroactive pay increases for the September 1 - November 13 period in mid-February.

The extra money represents pay raises approved by the 62nd legislatuve but stalled during the presidential wage-price freeze.

State officials have notified the federal pay board of intentions to go through with the raises that would have been granted September 1 had the freeze not been in effect. Since the pay board has until February 1 to challenge payments, Comptroller Robert S. Calvert said he would not accept retroactive payrolls until February 2.

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editar:

As I understand it, the way civilization works is, first you invent something to make life easier, like the automobile, then you wonder what to do with it when it becomes the unbearable nuisance anybody who was ever caught in a traffic jam will tell you it is.

Or take the telephone. The telephone is a fine thing when you need to use it, but it can ring at some of the worst times.

Therefore I was pleased to read in a newspaper last night right after my phone rang and it was a wrong number that a man in Maine is asking the Federal Communications Commission to cut off the phone service of a credit company that has been hounding him.

I didn't know this, but a new rule allows the Commission to disconnect a loan company's phone if it uses interstate telephone lines for harassment.

This is a splendid idea and there must be millions of parents of teen-age children who'll be looking into this law as soon as they find out about it.

But the law ought to be expanded. For example, why couldn't it cover the mail too?

Say the tax collector is hounding you with delinquent tax notices. Why shouldn't a man have the right to ask the Federal Communications Commission to stop him from using the mail? I don't know of anything more harassing then a tax notice.

Getting mail is one of the pleasures of life if the letter is from somebody you're interested in or has a check in it, but using the mail or the telephone to harass somebody just because he owes you, that's carrying civilization too far and ought to be stopped just as soon as I wind up collecting the few bills people owe me.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

BILL SOLVES FOOD LABEL MYSTERY

REP. B.S. ROSENTHAL (N.Y.) ". . . The recent incident involving contaminated vichyssoise that led to the death of a New York man from botulism points up an aggravating problem facing the food retailer and the consumer. .

"How was the retailer to know if the soup on his shelf was not made by Bon Vivant? How was the housewife to know if the soup in her cupboard was not the suspected Bon Vivant?. . .

"I have an answer. It is the HONEST LABEL ACT. . . This bill would require the name and place of business of the manufacturer, packager, and the distributor be printed on the packages of food, drugs, and cosmetics. . .

"For example, Ann Page and Jane Parker brand items in supermarkets of A & P, the Nation's largest grocery chain, may have been manufactured by A & P itself or may have been produced by a larger company which also turns out identical or nearly identical nationally known brand name products.

"A & P sells products under its own labels that are made by a wide variety of companies. Some of these include: Seabrook Farms; A & P frozen vegetables: Dole, A & P pineapple; Minute Maid orange juice drink; Stokely Van Camp and Libbey canned fruits; Del Monte, tuna and tomato sauce; Carnation, evaporated milk; Mrs. Filbert, Margarine; Vicks cough drops. . .

"Watsonville Canning Co., of California produces broccoli, lima beans, and other frozen vegetables under 42 different labels. . .

"Had consumers and retailers simply been told to beware of cans dated May 21, 1971, or June 3, June 23, April 22 -- that is what the....codes stand for -- it would have been quicker and easier to remove the correct cans. And it could have protected the manufacturer against needless removal of safe products.

"This is another reason for prompt enactment of my bill H.R. 8438. . . which would require all food packages should clearly show the date after which the product should no longer be sold. . .

"Shortly after the Bon Vivant incident, the FDA announced the recall of some Campbell's soups because of possible botulin contamination. Once again retailers and consumers began searching their shelves. Campbell's, unlike Bon Vivant, does not produce soups under any name other than its own, but before that information became widespread, there was a possible shadow of uncertainty cast over every can of soup, regardless of its brand. . .

"My bill not only protects the retailer and the consumer, but it protects the producer as well. . ."

Young Americans Jailed For Breaking Drug Laws

By Bill Hartley
Reuter Correspondent

Young Americans once sought the sources of their culture in the cathedrals, museums and libraries of the old world.

Now, all too often, they seek the sources of hashish, marijuana, jemp and kif in the back alleys of North Africa nd the Middle Eust. What they find, in many cases, is jail in a foreign land.

A Reuter survey of 20 countries shows about 900 young people, more than 550 of them Americans, imprisoned or awaiting trial away from their own countries.

Mexico, for example, has long been a close and convenient target for young Americans who want to escape the pressures and conventions at home. It also has long been identified with drug use -- British-born writer Aldous Huxley often wrote about his experiments there with hallucinatory druge.

At the moment, 301 young Americans are beng held in Mexican jails, the highest total of any country surveyed. Most of them are serving sentences of from three to eight years.

A little further afield, in Jamaica, six Americans face drug charges. Police say the Caribbean island has been drawing American hippies in increasing numbers since rumors spread among them that marijuana was easily obtainable there.

The usual penalty is a fine and deportation. Jail terms have been imposed mainly on offenders unable to pay the fines.

Fore more adventurous young travelers, many of them intrigued by eastern religions and habits, Asia and the Middle East have become magnets in the become magnets in the search for a new way of life.

Unfortunately this search often includes the use of drugs and in many of these countries, this is officially frowned on.

While in St. Louis it snowed several times and at times the temperature was below zero.

Mr. and Mrs. "Bulldog" Kornegay, Linda, Cheryl and Garry were in Cleveland January 14 to attend the wedding of their son, Mike to Miss Mary Lou Wisdom. Parents of the bride are Mr. Bill Wisdom of Rosenburg and Mrs. Ola Pope of Cleveland.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's mother. Rev. Stanely, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony.

The bride's dress was a blue street length and she wore white carnation corsage. Matron of honor was her sister - in - law, Mrs. Barbara Wisdom who wore a peach colored dress and a pink carnation corsage. Bestman was Donald Shaw of Gause, brother-in-law of the groom. Mrs. Pope chose a beige ensemble with a pink corsage while Mrs. Kornegay wore medium blue with a pink corsage.

The reception was held after the wedding in the home. A three tiered wedding cake decorated with tiny flower confection and lime sherbert punch was served.

Members of the house party included Mrs. Juanice Pace, Mrs. Lou Everett and Mrs. Claude Lagrone.

The couple went on a trip to San Antonio. Mr. Kornegay works in the oilfields and they will follow that line of work for the present.

Those attending from Gause besides the parents, sisters and brother were Mr. and Mrs. Claude Lagrone, Mrs. Raymond Shafer of Liberty, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Shafer of Rockdale and Mr. and Mrs. Kent Brashear of Austin.

Greenwich Observatory To Have Woman Director

By William Parry Reuter Corrspondent

SAN DIEGO, Calif.

Dr. E. Margaret Burbidge, who next summer will take on her new assignment as the first woman director of the 300 - year - old Royal Greenwich Observatory, says that one of her few regrets is that she'll never be able to go to the moon.

"Space research has slowed down too much," Dr. Burbidge said in an interview, "Trips to the moon--excepting for astronauts--will not be in my lifetime."

But other than that she is quite satisfied with her new job and the state of women in the science of astronomy, although she dreads leaving her new home in La Jolla, an exclusive suburb of San Diego, where she is a professor at the University of California.

But she says she is looking forward to her new position, one never before held by a woman.

"I will be working in a castle -- not a dreadfully old one -- the Herstmonceux castle at Hailsham, Sussex, England," she pointed out.

The world famous astronomer said that the new assignment was an indication of the career doors opening for women.

"I can remember," she said, "in the early days of my career when women were not allowed to use the telescope at Mt. Wilson Observatory (near Los Angeles). But this is no longer true."

Last year, Dr. Burbidge was asked to accept the Annie J. Cannon prize in astronomy, but declined the honor on the grounds that the judging was discriminatory since it was limited to women only.

The American Astronomical Society later appointed a committee to review the terms of the award.

Dr. Burbidge says she believes the youth of today is more serious and more dedicated than during her school days.

"I think the world is going to be in good hands when the young people of today take over," she said in her usual soft-spoken manner.

She became interested in astronomy when she was a child.

"I was a very tiny girl when my father -- he was a research chemist in Manchester, England -- started taking me out into the night and pointing out stars and constellations to me," she said.

Survey Shows Calcium Low In Texans Diet

Are you buying enough milk and dairy products for your family?

According to the Texas Nutrition Survey, calcium is one nutrient low in the diets of Texans surveyed, the specialist reports. Calcium is needed for well formed teeth. If one provides proper care for his teeth, he has a better chance of keeping them throughout life, she adds.

To decide what is enough for your family, check the daily food guide, suggests Frances Reasonover, Extension foods and nutrition specialist at Texas A&M University.

The daily food guide is a list of foods that give the nutrients needed each day for good health, Miss Reasonover explains. Milk is an important group of the food guide, necessary to the daily diet because of its calcium content.

The Texas Survey also showed very poor teeth condition in a high percentage of those examined. Although care and other conditions played a role in this poor condition, lack of calcium in the diet was one factor, Miss Reasonover emphasizes.

The specialist reminds that as a homemaker, it is vitally important you serve milk group foods and that you encourage your family to eat these nutritional foods.

Provide 2 to 3 cups of milk a day for children under 9; 3 or more cups for children 9 to 12; 4 or more cups for teens; and 2 or more cups for adults, Miss Reasonover suggests. The pregnant woman needs 3 or more cups and nursing mothers, 4 or more cups.

Try to see that your family gets the amount of milk needed for their age group, she reminds, or that they get other milk group foods that will also provide calcium.

Personal

Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Myers and children, Beth and Bob, of Temple, were dinner guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Brock and family on Sunday evening.

Birth

To Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd E. Rider of Cameron, a girl, Marlene, 9 pounds, born 2:30 a.m. January 25 at St. Edward Hospital.

FREEZING BUTTER

Store butter in its original protective wrapper or container until ready to use. But if you don't plan to use it within two or three days, you can freeze extra amounts of butter. Frozen butter will maintain its quality up to two months.

THE SPREAD'S THE THEME—A floral-printed cotton spread in yellow, blue, and orange sets the color scheme for a teen-ager's bed-sitting room. An orange window shade with matching valance fits into built-in shelves, while chairs and rug incorporate the blue of the spread. The old-fashioned washstand is painted orange red, and Mexican wicker baskets are splashed with yellow for accent.

Sugar Cost High For Obese

Every weight-conscious American knows that sugar is fattening, but unti recently the true extent of its plumping properties was unappreciated.

Scientists have now found that although a sugary cream puff and a starchy hamburber bun are equal in calories, the cream puffis two to five times more fattening. Apparently one calorie of sugar produces more fat than does one calorie of starch.

Feeding patients diets of alternately high sugar and high starch contents doctors at Brookhaven National Laboratory found that the percentage of sugar converted to blood fat on the sugar diet was two to five times greater than the percentage converted on the starch diet.

In addition, the fat-producing effects of sugar were further exaggerated in women taking oral contraceptives. This evidence suggests that women on the Pill should exercise caution with regard to sugar in their diets, irrespective of calorie content.

Tea Honors Bride-Elect Saturday

Mrs. Carroll Green honored her niece, Miss Marilyn Perrin, at a tea from 3 to 5 p.m. Saturday at the Green home in Cameron.

Miss Perrin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Perrin of Cameron and Irving, is the bride-elect of Mr. James C. Key of Sweeney, Texas. A February 19 wedding is planned.

Approximately 75 guests attended the engagement party. Forming the receiving line were Mrs. Carroll Green, Miss Perrin, Mrs. Frank Perrin, mother of the bride-elect, Mrs. James Key and Mrs. Tomlinson of Sweeney, mother and grandmother of the prospective groom, and the bride-elect's grandmothers, Mrs. E. A. Perrin and Mrs. Leland Green Sr.

Mrs. Dana Kestenbaum and Mrs. Dan Browder assisted guests registering at a table decorated with an arrangement of pink camellia blossoms.

A tiered arrangement of white daisy mums centered the serving table in the dining room where coffee, punch, cookies and mints were served. Table appointments were of silver and crystal.

Assisting in the houseparty were Mrs. Pete Harwell, Misses Valerie Green, Paula Folschinsky and Jane Callaway.

The hostess presented the honoree with a corsage of white daisy mums.

Luncheon Fetes Guests

Mrs. Fred P. Bergeron and Mrs. Harold Reagan who have recently moved to Rockdale were guests of honor at a luncheon Wednesday in the home of Mrs. Frank Luecke.

As an introduction to points of interest in Cameron, sculpture by James Brock, western artist whose home and studio are in Cameron, centered the luncheon tables.

Assisting the hostess was Mrs. O. B. Harden.

Texas To Hold Folklife Festival

Texas will hold the nation's first statewide folklife festival at San Antonio, September the 7th through the 10th, it was announced today by R. Henderson Shuffler, executive director of the University of Texas Institute of Texan Cultures.

Staged on the Institute grounds in downtown San Antion will feature the traditional foods, music dancing games and crafts brought to Texas by its immigrants from many lands.

"Every festival celebrates something," Shuffler said. "This one will celebrate the diversity of our cultural heritage, which makes Texas one of the most interesting places in the world in which to live and travel."

The varied and exciting elements for a statewide festival already exist in the many local celebrations which have become traditional in Texas. The Easter Fires of Fredericksburg and the Wurstfest at New Braunfels are examples of our German heritage.

Saint Louis' Day at Castroville bears the French influence, while the crawfish festivals in the Port Arthur area, with their bouncy cajun music, give the same heritage a different expression.

The annual Smorgasbord at Norse, the Greek Funstivals and Lebanese Nights of Magic in several major cities, the Fandangle at Albany, the annual Gathering of the Scottish Clans at Salado and St. Patrick's Day celebration at Shamrock are among the many such local festivals, each with its own special flavor, held each year in Texas. Most of these draw largely local or regional audiences.

The festival at the Institute is designed to serve as a statewide showcase for some of these special talents and delights of the local celebrations. Many Texans and out-of-state visitors will encounter them here for the first time, getting a taste of what they can enjoy again later by attending the local festivals of their choice.

Barnes Calls For Revision Of Trailer Brakes Law

Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes Friday called on Gov. Preston Smith to include revision of the protion of the "Rules of the Road" law involving trailers in the legislation which can be considered by a special session of the Legislature due later this year.

Barnes said the bill -- S. B. 183 -- contained language "which apparently is working hardships on many thousands of Texans who pull trailers behind their vehicles."

The bill requires trailers over 3000 pounds to have brakes on all wheels which can be operated from the towing vehicle plus emgergency brakes for the trailers.

"During my travels, I have heard complaints from farmers and ranchers who have to haul farm products and livestock, and from sportsmen who pull boats and trailers," Barnes wrote the Governor.

Barnes said these Texans "are being penalized in a manner that was not the intent of the Legislature."

"The cost of this law will run from $250 to $800 per trailer, and that means we are talking about $100,000-000, which I am sure you will agree is punitive," Barnes said.

He said a lesser requirement could be worked out to meet the necessary safety needs, in urging the Governor to include the legislative in matters to be considered.

Grain Sorghum Meeting Set

By Bill McCutchen

The Annual Milam County Grain Sorghum Meeting will be held Thursday night, January 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the Vocational Agriculture Building in Cameron.

Ben Spears, Extension Agronomist; and Rupert Palmer, Extension Weed Control Specialist will present the program.

The annual affair is designed to pretty well cover the waterfront as it applies to grain sorphum production. Spears has been asked to cover recent developments in grain sorghum production including all phases of production. Palmer will discuss weed and grass control in grain sorghum and present the latest findings in this field.

The meeting is open to all persons interested in grain sorghum production.

FREEZE DAMAGE

Two weeks after the severe freeze in early January, it is still difficult to tell the extent of freeze damage on Milam County small grains.

Reports from surrounding counties also indicate heavy freeze damage and considerable grain loss. Some stocker calves will have to be moved in this area because of the loss of small grain pastures.

In checking Gene Hillman's small grain plots, damage seems more extensive on triticalse varieties and closely grazed oats, but most are recovering.

Dekalb 9290, which is a grazing wheat, received considerably less freeze damage than any check and no plant kill. It is also making the fastest growth following the freeze. The 9290 had a bad rust infestation and grew slower than any of the plots prior to the freeze.

The Ora oats are making the next best comeback. Close grazed Ora oats received a 14% plant kill, while ungrazed or lightly grazed Ora's received no winterkill and relatively light leaf loss.

Triticalse varieties were all too killed and the percent plant kill ranges from 6% to 16%. Heaviest winterkill was FAS-GRO 203, a variety that had looked good and made the best growth of any trial before the freeze.

School Set For Commercial Bankers At Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION

The 20th annual Texas Farm and Ranch Credit School for Commercial Bankers, with the theme of "Financing a Changing Agriculture," is set for February 14-16 at Texas A&M University.

Program Chairman Tom Prater, Extension Service economist - management, said the school attracts about 200 bankers each year.

He said the conference brings commercial bankers the latest information on agriculture developments--information that will help in decision-making and "fulfilling responsibilities to the total agricultural industry."

The chairman pointed out that new and more complex problems are being faced within the agricultural industry. The increased amount of capital needed by farmers and ranchers and its high cost are some of those problems.

"No effort has been spared by the school's planners in developing a most timely program and securing some of the state's top authorities on agricultural credit," Prater said.

There will be three general areas of discussion during the two-day program: "General Economic Agricultural Outlook;" "Sources of Funds;" and "Make Yourself A Better Banker for Your Customers."

Prater said sponsors are the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Texas Bankers Association.

The school is planned by the TBA Agricultural Committee and conducted by the A&M Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology Department.

All bankers are invited to the school, and programs have been mailed to all commercial banks in Texas, Prater said.

Australian Farm Shows Food-Waste Chain Is Possible

A small farm in Sydney, Australia is showing that an interlinked food-waste chain is possible, points out Dr. David Mellor, Extension poultry marketing specialist.

The food cycle on the farm works its way down through turkeys, cattle, hogs, ducks and fish. The fish are finally ground up and fed back to turkeys and hogs.

The farm annually produces 4,000 turkeys, 250 hogs, 25 head of cattle and 500 ducks on only 10 acres of land.

Poultry fits in well in the food-waste chain as the feed to food conversion for all poultry is among the best of any animal species.

COUNTY GOV'T

Texas Assistant Attorney General J. C. Davis will discuss the laws affecting county government during the 14th Annual County Judges and Commissioners Conference at Texas A&M University, February 9-10. Theme of the conference is "High Noon for County Government."

ASCS NEWS

The U. S. Department of Agriculture today announced it plans to exclude peanuts from the skip-row planting provision beginning with the 1972 crop program. This will mean that where peanuts are planted in a skip row pattern, the entire field will be counted as peanut acreage.

The action is being taken in order to prevent abnormal increases in yields and hold down program costs, USDA officials explained. Commodity Credit Corporation has acquired about 35 percent of the 1970 crop of peanuts and present indications are it will take over a larger percentage of the 1971 crop.

Field studies indicate that yields increase by 10 to 20 percent when peanuts are planted in skip-row pattern, making every row an outside row thereby improving growing conditions.

USDA has no authority, as it has in the case of other crops, to reduce the minimum peanut allotment of 1,610,000 acres to avoid surpluses resulting from higher yields. Peanut yields have been rising at a faster rate than consumption.

While skip-row planting of peanuts is not widespread now, the promise of improved yields would tend to promote the practice unless the regulations are changed, USDA indicated.

STATE SOYBEAN MEET

The fifth annual meeting of the Texas Soybean Association will be held February 4 at the Texas A&M Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Beaumont. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m.

Acorns Studied For Use As Food

COLLEGE STATION

Acorns, one of ancient man's food staples, are being studied at Texas A&M University with the idea that the nuts might have a place in modern diets.

The fruit of the oak, in fact, is still finding its way to dinner tables among poorer classes in such places as Italy and Spain. These people utilize the nuts in bread, cake and even as a coffee substitute.

American pioneers learned from the Indians how to use acorns in gruels, cakes and tortillas. The usual process was hulling, grinding, and then leaching with boiling water or water-ash soaks to extract tannin and other bitter principles. The result was pounded into a meal.

At Texas A&M, graduate student R. P. Ofcarcik and Dr. E. E. Burns of the Soil and Crop Sciences Department are studying the chemical and physical properties for human use. And, ever-mindful of wildlife, the study team has a taste testing panel of squirrels, nature's own acorn gourmets.

All sorts of tests have been devised, Burns said. There is variability according to the kind of oak. Other tests measure moisture, protein and fat. The amount of tannin is an index of bitterness. Physical properties include size, shape, color and texture of shell and kernel.

Generally, crude protein varies from 4 to 7.5 percent, and fat is about 15 percent. Samples from the sandjack, water and southern red oaks tended to be higher. The fat content from acorns of one southern red oak was 31 percent.

Burns said evaulation of some samples was difficult because of masking effect of bitter materials. Some acorns, however, were almost bitter-free, sweet and flavorful.

The squirrel taste panel was highly selective and consistent in its preferences. Acorns with low tannin pleased their palates the most. The bushy tailed connoisseurs demonstrated that their favorite nuts came from the post oaks and the red and black oaks.

Burns said further development of acrons as a food source will involve two approaches.

First, a selection program is needed to find nuts of top taste and nutrition. Second, a processing technology should be developed to cheaply and quickly remove bitterness found in nearly all acorns.

The wide availability and nutritious composition give acorns considerable potential as a human food, Burns said.

Clyde Hensley Wins SCS Conservation Award

The coveted conservation farmer award was made to Clyde Hensley of the Belmena community by the Central Texas Soil and Water Conservation District directors.

This award is made each year to the outstanding farmer or rancher conservationist in the district. He is then entered in the state awards contest for this category. The district directors feel that he will be a strong contender in the state competition.

Hensley operates a diversified 600 acre farm in the blackland resource area. About one half of the land is used for cropland where cotton, maize, and small grain are grown as the major cash crops.

On the pastureland, coastal bermudagrass and Ermelo lovegrass are managed to provide year long grazing for his cow-calf enterprise.

All permanent type conservation has been applied to the land. This includes terraces, waterways, diversions, ponds, and critical area plantings. All needed land use changes have been made to get the best utlization of both pasture and cropland.

Each year the most modern and practical management practices are applied to round out a diversified family farm unit that excells in all phases of production while maintaining or improving the resource base for the next generation.

SBA OFFICER

On Wednesday, February 2, C. H. Creed, Loan Officer of the Small Business Administration, will be at the Bryan - College Station Chamber of Commerce from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to discuss SBA's financial and management assistance programs.

IMPROVING ENVIRONMENT

The Beautify Texas Council is boosting its efforts to improve nearly all phases of the environment. Formed about five years ago, the council's main aid was to reduce litter. Now its efforts include work against tion.

America is growing about eight percent more wood than it consumes—but shrinking forest acreage and rising needs call for more intensive forestry in future.

Editors Endorse Dolph Briscoe

Dolph Briscoe, candidate for Governor of Texas, received a significant, unconditional editorial endorsement from two of Texas' major newspapers, the Austin American-Statesman and the Waco Tribune-Herald, on New Year's Day, according to a news release from his headquarters.

The Austin American Statesman and the Waco Tribune - Herald both noted that Briscoe "meets all the criteria for a restoration of public confidence in the governor's office."

The two large city papers joined with ten other newspapers across Texas in placing the strength of their editorial knowledge behind the candidate from southwest Texas, Dolph Briscoe, of Uvalde.

Both the Austin American -Statesman and the Waco Tribune-Herald noted that Briscoe had built a far flung structure of livestock and land and financial enterprises with business - like ability and intelligence. The editorials note that all who know Dolph Briscoe hold him in high esteem and testify to the personal qualifications of ability, integrity, and dignity needed in a state leader.

The Austin American - Statesman carried the endorsement further by noting: "Urgency for Texans is on the home front as we enter 1972. For that reason the Austin American-Statesman is willing to stand up and be counted in the assertion that the overriding question in the governor's race is public confidence in our state government."

The editorial noted that Governor Smith had been guilty of indiscretion in the bank loan with Dr. Elmer Baum, although not guilty of a violation of law. This indiscrete act has helped to destroy public confidence, the newspaper noted, and as such, "Smith cannot furnish the untarnished leadership that the state needs."

The newspapers both dismissed Ben Barnes as a serious gubernatorial contender because he represents a "product of the same political power system that has grown up around the House Speaker's office."

"Silent Speech"

A research project that could lead to the development of a new measure of brain activity during sleep is getting under way with support from the National Institute of Mental Health.

Scientists at the University of Texas are monitoring the activity of the tongue and laryngeal muscles during sleep to determine whether "silent sleep"—known scientifically as subvocal motor activity — accompanies dreams.

If it is found that "silent speech" does occur, the phenomenon could be used as a measure of dream content and sleep talking.

The method of study is to make recordings during sleep from representative points in the laryngeal and upper articulatory musculature to determine the frequency and patterning of subvocal muscle activity.

College student volunteers are being selected on the basis of a sleep questionnaire which includes questions about dream recall and sleep talking.

Dr. Peter F. MacNeilage, Director of the University's Linguistics Laboratory, says that if "silent speech" is found to occur, it may be a useful index of neurological organization during sleep and a useful manifestation of dream content."

Scientists have found, in previous studies of sleep, that rapid eye movements (REM's) accompany most dreams. Thus careful studies of REM's have been used widely as overt measures of sleep and dream activity. This and other research information has aided sleep research immeasurably.

If "silent speech", or subvocal motor activity, can be determined and informative data on it collected, the conclusions from its analysis should add yet another significant step to the important research going on to bring useful understanding of what man's physiological and psychological needs and patterns are for sleep, in health and illness.

Choosing Books For Children

"Books bulging with vivid pictures and stories fascinate children of all ages," reminded Jane Fleischer, Extension family life education specialist at Texas A&M University.

"When children grow up with books, the books become their friends," Miss Fleischer explained. "And it's almost impossible to start too soon. By his first birthday, a toddler takes delight in recognizing familiar sc in recognizing familiar scenes and objects in books."

Selecting books for preschool children requires careful consiferation, according to the specialist.

"Illustrated books should be adorned with clear, intense and pleasing colors. Pictures should have simple lines for the very young child and progress to greater detail for older children.

"Size and shape of books should also be suitable to the age of the child," she added. "Choose well-constructed books with strong binding and good paper."

Story books should described reasonable characters in situations familiar to the young child, Miss Fleischer said. "By the time the child is five, he will enjoy books of adventure, imagination and people in other lands."

TINKER TOY CHURCH

And it has a silver bell on the steeple and a cross on top. No one suggested to Bobby that he use his birthday toy this way. He did it himself.

He could have made a ferris wheel, or a barn, or a wagon. But, as it happens, he made a church. Maybe it is because, since he was a tot, the Church has been so important in his life.

To Bobby the Church represents a warmth and love that made him want to "build one of his own."

Does your child feel that way?

TP&L, A&M Working To Develop Catfish Farming

Catfish, an important but publicly obscure source of high protein, may someday become as common as meat and potatoes on the world's dinner tables.

And to help prepare for this dietary advance, Texas A&M University and Texas Power & Light Company are working together to develop comprehensive information regarding the most efficient methods of raising whiskerfish.

In fact, some 100,000 catfish fingerlings about 5 inches long are now making their homes in the discharge canal of TP&L's Trinidad Steam Electric Station near Athens in Henderson County.

The unique research project is being funded entirely by TP&L, and all catfish and other related fish studies at the Trinidad site are being conducted by scientists at Texas A&M. Research will be performed over a 7-year period.

Texas A&M scientists estimate that by the end of the 7-year research period, more than two million pounds of catfish will be raised annually at Trinidad.

The discharge canal at Trinidad offers an excellent location to raise catfish because warm water coming from the plant after finishing its electricity-producing cycle is particularly conductive to fish growth.

GROW FASTER

A&M researchers point out that marketable catfish (those weighing about one to one and one-half pounds) can be grown from the egg at Trinidad in only 10 months, compared to 18 months in waters with cooler average temperatures. By beginning with 5-inch fish, only 4 months of growth is needed for the fish to obtain marketable size.

Before the catfish research program was begun, there was no practical use for the warm water which left the plant by way of the discharge canal for cooling in the TP&L lake at Trinidad. By helping raise catfish, much of this waste heat has now been converted to useful and beneficial energy.

TP&L received its first shipment of 100,000 catfish in early January, 1972. The small fish were transported from a commercial dealer in Mississippi to Trinidad in a truck designed specifically to keep the fish alive during the lengthy trip.

At Trinidad, the catfish were placed in small holding pond near the discharge canal there A&M graduate students, headed by Dr. John Kelley, Jr. of Texas A&M checked the fingerlings for signs of disease or parasites.

CATFISH CAGES

From the holding pond, the students transferred the young catfish to custom-built cages placed in at 40,000 square-foot area of the discharge canal. The cages are constructed of galvanized mesh wire supported by angle-iron frames and measure 3x3x4 feet.

Currently, the project involved 200 cages, but the purchase of another 400 cages is anticipated during the term of the research study.

Before the cages could be placed in the water, TP&L dredged a large area of its discharge canal to a depth of 8 feet. Normal depth of the canal is 2 feet.

Daily, the young catfish are fed pre-determined amounts of a floating, high-protein, commercial fish food. And on alternate weeks, the fingerlings' progress and growth is carefully observed and noted by two A&M graduate students who live at the research site. In addition, the young fish are regularly checked for diseases and/or parasites which might harm the caged catfish or other species of natural fish in the lake.

REPEAT CYCLE

A the end of the optimum growth period, in this case 4 months, the catfish -- which are the sole property of Texas A&M University -- are removed from their cages for commercial distribution. A new batch of catfish will then be added, and the entire cycle will resume.

Since the catfish are the property of A&M, TP&L does not reap any profits from their final disposition. However, under the contract between TP&L and Texas A&M, it is stipulated that all proceeds from marketable catfish will be reinvested in catfish research.

TP&L officials point out that the Company has no desire to enter the commercial catfish business. Rather, the Company is participating in the research project because it recognized the significant nutritional and economic value that catfish will have in the near future.

Cong. Poage Announces Candidacy For Reelection

CONG. W. R. POAGE

TO THE FRIENDS I HAVE LONG REPRESENTED:

For many years you have honored me by electing me as your Congressman. I have sought to be of service to you and to Central Texas. I hope I have been successful. I know that you are familiar with my record of achievement for the country at large and for our District.

I love and respect my country and its flag. I believe in the enforcement of our country's laws. I do not tolerate anarchy which must follow if the individual is to decide for himself what laws are to be obeyed. I believe in help for all those who need help but I also believe that all those who can work should work. I believe in equal educational opportunities for all our people in community schools. Finally, I believe that this is a Representative Democracy and that it is the duty of the Representative to try to reflect the views of those he represents.

You may not agree with these views. I only ask that you give me credit for honestly stating my views and that you will not oppose me because we disagree on some item unless you are convinced that some other candidate will more nearly reflect your views.

You are acquainted with my record both as to legislation and as to development of our District.

I have been privileged to assist in the development of the great Brazos River work including many dams and lakes on the river and its tributaries -- Possum Kingdom, Whitney, Belton, Waco, Proctor, Stillhouse Hollow, and the pending dams on the San Gabriel.

I was the author of the Upstream Flood Prevention Program. (Brushy Creek was the first project under this program in the United States).

I was the co-author of the Poage-Aiken Bill under which we have established rural water and sewerage systems in many of our counties (Golinda received the first water system in Texas, and Chilton received the first sewerage system in the U. S.).

I was the author of the first Rural Telephone Bill in 1949, and of the recently passed Rural Telephone Bank Bill.

I am the author of the comprehensive Rural Development Bill now pending before Congress.

As far as I can find, I was the first to propose a Student Loan Fund.

I have "no patent medicine" remedies for the problems of our country or of the world, but I am sure that no matter what critics may say, common sense suggests that experience is helpful in doing this job. There are only five out of the 435 Members of the House who have had more experience than I (two of these are from Texas). I have served five years as Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. My staff, both in Washington and in Texas, is composed of experienced people who know and love Central Texas. We can't be able to get assistance in every case but we have been able to help hundreds of people, especially servicemen and veterans. I think it is clear that our chances of success in these cases are better than that of an inexperienced office.

It is always my hope for our office to give the very best possible service but in a Democracy no one can serve at all times he can be elected. Since I am confronted with an opponent, I expect to spend whatever time and effort is necessary to canvass the District and to win the nomination.

With every good wish, I am

Your friend and Congressman,

W. R. Poage

New Rent Regulations Are Outlined

Allowable residential rental increases provided for under the new rent regulations were described today by R. L. Phinney, Internal Revenue Service District Director for southern Texas.

Phinney explained that the Price Commission's rent regulations are designed to reduce the average rate of rent increases while allowing the landlord to maintain a reasonable rate of profit. Landlords are allowed a basic 2-1/2 per cent annual increase to cover operating costs. This increment may be added even if there is not an identifiable increase in operating costs.

Rent may not be raised higher than the 2-1/2 percent figure except for increases in state and local real estate taxes, state and local fees, levies, municipal service charges (other than gas and electricity), and capital improvements. These charges, with certain limitations, may be added to the base rent on a dollar for dollar basis in addition to the 2-1/2 percent increase.

Capital improvements must have been made after August 15, 1972, to qualify for a rent increase. The monthly increase is limited to 1.5 percent of the cost applicable to the rental unit or units and can only be passed on to renters on a prorata basis. However, a rent increase for a capital improvement may not exceed ten percent of the monthly rental without IRS approval.

Phinney reminded landlords that 30 days written notice is required before a rent increase can go into effect.

Economic Stabilization Questions and Answers

Internal Revenue Service

This column of questions and answers on Federal tax matters is provided by the U. S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked ty taxpayers.

Q- What is the personal exemption for 1971?

A - The Revenue Act of 1971 increased the allowance for personal exemption to $675 for the 1971 tax year.

Q - My son earned more than $675 from a summer job last year. Can I still claim him as a dependent?

A - If your son was a full-time student regardless of age for some part of each of any five months of 1971 or was less than 19 years old at the end of the year, you can claim him as a dependent regardless of how much money he made, provided you meet all the other dependency tests, including furnishing over one-half of your son's total support.

Q - I received a refund on my 1970 state income tax in 1971. Do I have to report this as income on my 1971 Federal income tax return?

A - You must include in income for the year of receipt that part of the refund that gave you a tax benefit in the earlier year. For example, if you took a deduction for state income taxes on your 1970 Federal income tax return and received the full benefit of the deduction through a reduction in tax, you must include the refund as income on your 1971 Federal return. On the other hand, if you did not deduct state income taxes on your 1970 Federal return, the refund is not to be included on your 1971 Federal return.

Q - Are all medical expensesdeductible?

A - No. Except for medical insurance premiums, only those unreimbursed medical expenses you paid that exceed three percent of your adjusted gross income are deductible. In addition, medical expenses are deductible only if you itemize your deductions. You may deduct one-half of your medical insurance premiums up to $150 without regard to the three percent limitation with the balance also deductible subject to the three percent rule.

Payments for medicines and drugs may be included in your medical expenses only to the extent they exceed one percent of your adjusted gross income. This excess is then subject to the three percent limitation.

Q - How much money can I earn before I have to file a Federal income tax return?

A - You must file a Federal income tax return if you are single and had income of $1,700 or more last year ($2,300 if you are 65 or older) or if you are married and you and your spouse's combined income is $2,300 or more. ($2,900 if one spouse is 65 or older, $3,500 if both of you are 65 or older). If you are self-employed and had net earnings from self-employment of $400 or more, you must file a Federal income tax return.

Q - Will the IRS still figure my tax for me?

A - If your adjusted gross income is $20,000 or less and consists only of wages or salaries and tips, dividends, interest, pensions, and annuities, the IRS will be glad to compute your tax at your request. However, you must take the standard deduction instead of itemizing your deductions, fill in certain lines, and file your return by April 17, to have the IRS do the figuring for you. Be sure to read the instructions that come with the Form 1040 as the the lines that have to be completed.

Q - When will I get my W-2 form from my employer? I can't file my income tax return without it.

A - Employers are required to furnish their employees Wages and Tax Statements, Forms W-2, by January 31, 1972.

THE INFORMED CONSUMER

BY CRAWFORD C. MARTIN
Attorney General of Texas

"What can I do to get out of this contract? This gyp outfit came by and talked me into signing up with them, and I am really unhappy with the deal."

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office hears this plaintive plea all too often, but the sad truth of the matter is that there is not much anyone can do about a situation like this.

When you put your signature on that dotted line, in the eyes of the law you've had it. It is almost impossible to "get out" of the contract as the many consumers contacting our office desire, and if consumers want to try to break the contract they need to get their own private attorney. This is not something which the Attorney General's Office can do for them.

If the above seems to put the consumer in hot water, remember we are talking about his plight after he has signed the contract. Happily, he does have options prior to signing on the dotted line. The informed consumer will, of course, always be wary when entering into a contract. This is the first rule of survival in the world of legal contracts and red tape.

Anytime you are asked to sign an instrument in a business deal, you can be pretty sure that there is a reason and that the person asking you to sign is not just an autograph collector in the sense that that term is normally used. Any instrument may be a contract, so read it thoroughly . . . read every single word, even the small ones.

Many times the small ones are the ones that cause you the most trouble later on. The second rule for survival then is to read every instrument carefully before you sign.

The third rule is that if you don't understand something you have been asked to sign, refuse to sign it. Don't take chances.

Meeting Set To Discuss Brake Law

State Rep. Dan Kubiak of District 27 today announded that there will be a special meeting in Rockdale on January 31 for all persons concerned with the new brake and lighting law on trailers. The meeting will be held in the Rockdale State Bank Community Room at 7 p.m. and is open to the public. The Texas Department of Public Safety will send a representative to discuss all facets of the new law. Rep. Kubiak again stated, "There is no basic change for farm trailers grossing less than 10,000 pounds, and brakes should not be installed. The DPS will observe an "educational and informational" period until after the coming special session has considered repealing the brakes provision."

Surge brakes have also been declared legal on trailers. Colonel Speir advised that farm trailers should travel at a reasonable rate of speed until the 30 mile per hour limit is raised.

This meeting is open to the public, and all owners of any type of trailers are encouraged to attend the meeting on January 31, Kubiak stted.

Teaching Post AT TU For Hudson

Dr. W. Ronald Hudson, who for the past two-and-one-half years has held a high-level administrative post in the College of Engineering at the University of Texas, returned Monday to his favorite job -- teaching.

Hudson, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hudson of Cameron, has been associate dean for advanced programs in the engineering college since June 1970. Before that he was an assistant dean for one year.

A member of UT Austin faculty for the past nine years, Hudson is a specialist on road and pavement programs. He is an associate professor in the Department of Civil Engineering.

During the 18 months he served on the administrative staff of Engineering Dean Earnest F. Gloyna, Hudson accordinated the activities of the Office of Continuing Engineering Studies, the Bureau of Engineering Research, the Engineering Foundation and the Industrial Associates Program.

Assuming his teaching and research obligations on a full-time basis, Hudson will work with both undergraduate and graduate students. He will also be conducting transportation studies in the Center for Highway Research in the Civil Engineering Department.

Sen. Bill Patman Files For 18th Senatorial District

SEN. BILL PATMAN

Senator William N. (Bill) Patman has filed his formal application for re-election from the 18th senatorial district of Texas which includes Milam County under the new state redistricting plan. Senator Patman filed for a place on the Democratic Primary Ballot with Democratic County Chairman C. R. (Roy) Law.

An 11-year Senate veteran, Patman first won election over formidable incumbent opposition in 1960, carrying each of the 12 counties which then made up the district by a better than 2-to-1 margin. He again won a landslide victory when redistricting in 1966 pitted him against another Senate incumbent.

During his four terms in the Senate, Patman has served on virtually every important Senate Committee, including Finance, Jurisprudence, and State Affairs. Re-election will rank him fifth highest in seniority among the 31-member body.

For the past five years Patman, who is a farmer and rancher himself as well as an attorney, has served as chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Livestock. He has sponsored much legislation in this area which is of vital importance to the economy of Milam County. He has also championed measures in the fields of public health, government economy, and consumer protection, being particularly well-known in the later regard for his successful fights against exorbitant raising of interest rates.

In a brief statement to the press, Patman said his more detailed formal announcement will be forthcoming soon.

Family Room Offers Bonus

The cost of an added family room can be calculated in dollars per square foot, but the dividends mustn't be ignored--a room for eating, TV-watching, relaxing, entertaining, and many family activities.

A too-small family room, with orphan furniture and used only marginally, is a natural beginning point for knocking out a wall and adding an informal living space.

A new or remodeled family room also offers the perfect point to expand living areas to the outdoors, with a wood deck reached through a sliding glass door, or a court enclosed by wood privacy screens.

Talking Computer Goal Of Scientists

By Bruce Russell

MENLO PARK, Calif.

Scientists at the Stanford Research Institute are trying to build a talking computer by 1980.

They say the computer will carry on an intelligent dialogue with any American who limits himself to about 1,000 words.

Dr. Bertran Raphael, in charge of the project, said about eight scientists are working on it full-time, including language experts.

He said computers have already been developed which obey simple, clearly spoken commands.

But Raphael said the task facing his project was to develop a computer that could analyze the flow of human speech and eliminate stammering and fill in for dropped words.

The job of the language experts is to analyse normal human speech patterns to instruct the computer.

Raphael said one of the main applications of such a computer would be to instruct technicians in how to repair equipment.

The technician would put questions, "how do I remove such a part?" or "how should I connect the replacement?"

The computer would then reply orally or by a print out display on a screen.

But as for a computer that might start issuing orders itself like the one called Hal in the Film "2001: A Space Odyssey" Raphael said: "We are not looking for any great breakthrough. I don't see any danger of that happening."

Parson Flies Territory

By Noel Masters
Reuter Correspondent

DARWIN, AUSTRALIA

Australia's 68-year-old "Flying Parson" is still going at full throttle after 36 years of bringing spiritual medicine to a remote area of the northern territory.

The drone of the Rev. Harold Shepardson's Cessna plane is a familiar sound to tribes of aborigines scattered over a 37,000 square mile reservation in Arnhem Land.

"Sheppie" - a sort of latter-day ministering angel with his own set of wings -- has become their teacher, adviser and friend, as well as pastor.

Fit and tanned, he flies supplies every day to lonely outposts, and transports missionaires around a network of Methodist missions, often providing an air link with more populated areas hundreds of miles apart.

In Arnhem Land, where airstrips are unsophisticated, Sheppie often lands his aircraft on makeshift strips cleared by his aboriginal helpers more than 30 years ago.

Throughout the northern territory there are over 100 airstrips, some hacked out of the scrub by Australian and allied forces in World War II. Some are used by livestock companies, others by mining companies, and some only by Sheppie.

He says that if the airstrips had not been built at some of the places he visits, the only other way to travel would be four-wheel vehicle or on horseback, taking days or weeks instead of a few hours.

One of the problems he faces with most strips is regrowth of scrub after the summer wet season in Arnhem Land, which forms a peninsula like a bump on Australia's northern coastline.

Don't lose your voice!

When the person on the other end of your telephone line can't hear you, there isn't much point in talking. If the fault is ours, we want to know about it. But before you speak to us, try speaking up to the other party. If you're holding the handset below your chin, he won't hear much. But if you talk directly into the mouthpiece, your voice comes through loud and clear. Though it's only a small tip, it doesn't leave you speechless.

Florida's Fish Industry Dying

By Malcolm Balfour
Reuter Correspondent

MIAMI

South Florida is famous for its fresh fish dinners. Yet order fresh fish in a Miami restaurant, and there's a 70 per cent chance it has been flown in from somewhere else.

Seymour Friend, who for the past 29 years has operated the Sanitary Fish Market in Miami Beach says "Every year the situation gets worse. Fishermen just aren't getting the catches they should in Florida waters. The fish industry in Miam is a dying trade--like shoemaking.

"I remember when we used to get thousands of pompano right out of our own Biscayne Bay. From Fernandina south, Florida's coastline was maybe the first shrimp - producing area. Now, the shrimp you eat in Miami may well have been caught off the coast of British Guiana, or Arabia."

Friend listed several reasons for the decline in Florida fishing. He said the finest Florida shrimp beds were "traded in for a spaceport."

He said that the Cape Canaveral area has been virtually barren ever since the U.S. decided to send a man to the moon.

"Then here in Miami the flourishing cruise ship industry has caused all kinds of oil pollution in Biscayne Bay," he added.

In addition to the pollution caused by technology, Friend said several attacks of red tide, on both the east and west coast of Florida in recent years, have taken their toll of fishing.

Friend still gets some Florida fish -- from Tampa and St. Petersburg on the Gulf Coast and a small amount from Cocoa-- but it isn't sufficient. Most of his supply comes down iced on huge trucks from New York, Chicago and Canada. "I have to import three fourths of my fish into Florida, and I know it's the same with the other markets here," he said.

During the past summer, Friend went on a tour of Europe where he visited many of the larger fish markets. "They still get fish over there the way we used to in Miami. London, Copenhagen, Athens-- you name it, they're getting decent fish over there."

He did criticize the Russian and Japanese fleets for "raping the ocean," with nets that are so tightly woven they don't leave little fish to grow into big fish for tomorrow. "They just drag everything that comes up into their nets, like they were steel buckets."

Friend has seen "an untold number" of his fishing boat owner friends going out of business. "Many of them are putting their boats up on the dock. It's not profitable for them to send their boats out. The size of the catch makes it impractical for a fisherman to go out and leave his family, so they're all getting jobs inland these days. Young people aren't going into the industry and the older ones are dying out.

"It's a very sorry state of affairs," said Seymour Friend.

WATER TO BE SOLD

Rotterdam, The Netherlands, Reuter - A Rotterdam dairy shop owner plans to sell his customers cartons of pure Norwegian drinking water because of the bad quality of Rotterdam's drinking water supplies.

CURLER PAYS OFF

Perth, Australia, Reuter - Mrs. Faith Scudds, 59, who injured her knee when she slipped on a hair curler in a beauty shop, has been awarded just over $3,500 damages.

Pet Turtle Business Threatened

MIAMI

County officials have approved a controversial turtle inspection ordinance which supporters as well as opponents say could practically destroy the million - dollar - a - year pet turtle business in this county.

Milton Saslaw, county health director, proposed the ordinance to protect the public against salmonella, a disease which many turtles carry. He said the disease is harmless to turtles but it could casue cramps and other stomach disorders particularly among children who play with turtles and put their hands in their mouths. In rare cases, he said, it has caused brain damage.

The ordinance, which is effective Feb. 1, says no turtle may be sold unless it is certified free of salmonella by the state from which it is shipped. Saslaw said nearly all turtles sold here come from turtle farms in Mississippi or Louisiana.

The health director said inspectors will go to pet shops to inspect turtles if he feels there is a need. He added he doubted there will be because the turtle industry has been unable to breed a salmonella - free turtle.

He agreed with pet shop owners that the ordinance could virtually end the sale of pet turtles here.

Pollution Stops Birds Migration

By Ikuo Anai
Reuter Correspondent

TOKYO

Many species of birds have stopped their seasonal migration to Japan because of pollution and the destruction of their natural habitat.

Officially there are 424 species of birds in Japan, of which 76 per cent are migratory.

A recent survey by the government's environmental agency warned that the number of migratory birds in this country was declining alarmingly.

For example, the survey reported only 5,000 wild geese sighted in 1971 -- one-tenth the number recorded in 1953.

A growing conservation movement, which puts the blame for the decreasing number of birds on air and water pollution and the spread of agricultural chemicals, is being joined by ornithologists, members of the public and the government.

The environmental agency pointed out that industrial encroachment has reduced the number of traditional wintering places for the birds from 149 to 27.

To protect water birds pollution and destruction of their natural habitat, the agency has designated Lake Biwa, Japan's largest, as a protected area.

Political Refugees Shelter In Egypt

By Assem Hassan
Reuter Correspondent

CAIRO

An estimated 2,000 political refugees, including deposed kings, ex-presidents, former prime ministers and would-be revolutionaries, are living in Egypt.

Some of them were Egypt's enemies while in power. But they remain unmolested, supported in many cases by government grants. The grants range from about 35 to 750 dollars a month, according to their status.

Egypt has played a traditional role as a place of asylum and history records no case of a political refugee being handed over to his enemies.

Even if the refugee's enemies are Egypt's friends he will be safe. Ex-king Idris of Libya is one such example. The aged king, who fled to Egypt in 1969, was condemned to death in absentia in November 1971 by a revolutionary court under Libya's new head of state Colonel Muhammer Gaddafi.

Although Egypt is Libya's close ally in a tripartite federation with Syria, the king, who lives quietly and obscurely in a villa in suburban Heliopolis, will be allowed to spend the rest of his days in peace with no fear of extradition.

Perhaps the first displaced person to achieve fame in Egypt in Biblical days, was the prophet Joseph, son of Jacob. Although sold into bondage he later gained the pharoh's favor and became the world's first known finance minister.

The Greek philosopher Plato spent some years in Egypt during his exile after the execution of his teachers Socrates early in the fourth century B.C.

Before the 1952 revolution in Egypt when King Farouk was deposed, Egypt was a home for many of Europe's ousted monarchs, including ex-king Zog of Albania.

African nationalists in recent times have turned to Egypt. Many from Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco lived in pre-revolutionary days, among them President Habid Bourguiba of Tunisia and former Algerian leader Ahmed Ben Bella.

One of the most dramatic refugee episodes in recent years involved the former Jordanian premier, Brig. Mohammed Daoud, who was prime minister during the bloody clashes between Jordanian troops and Palestinian guerrillas in September 1970.

He came to Cairo for an Arab summit and then disappeared. A resignation note was found in the bedroom of his Cairo hotel. He later emerged from hiding and is still living in Cairo.

Lice On Exhibit At Museum

NEW YORK

For years one has been able to see the blue whale, the largest living creature, and the bones of huge dinosaurs at the American Museum of Natural History, and now the institution has gone to the other extreme -- with an exhibit of lice.

The show is January's "Exhibit of the Month" and consists of a wax model of a body louse and a recreated communal living scene.

It is this communal scene that makes the exhibit a timely one, a spokesman for the museum said.

Human lice were almost eradicated by DDT developed during World War II, but are now on the increase due to communal life styles among young people and their "low standards of hygiene," he said.

While the louse has always been regarded as a fact of life for soldiers, vagrants, prostitutes and overcrowded poor, the museum points out that during the past few years doctors have noted a substantial increase in lice among young people who choose to live in communes.

The exhibit includes used cups, dirty blankets and a community hairbrush, all of which are to a louse what nectar is to a honey bee.

Cat Farm Started In Venezuela

By Uli Schmetzer
Reuter Correspondent

CARACAS, VENEZUELA

The Pied Pipers of Coro, a newly formed company, plan to bring tens of thousands of cats and mice to Coro, the quiet little capital of the Venezuelan mountain state of Falcon.

The town of 52,000 inhabitants is jubilant because cat fur is expected to be the basis of a booming new industry. The more mice can be bred to feed the cats, the more cats can be kept at the new Pied Pipers Cat Farm.

The regional development band has put its financial resources behind the cat and mouse industry, which it expects to become one of the main money-makers in the poor region.

The new company plans to have a cat population of at least 60,000 and some 200,000 mice in January.

The Pied Pipers -- made up of four doctors and a banker -- said they discovered that a cat pelt sell for 50 cents on the United States market.

Catgut is sold to hospitals for surgical stitching and also used for the strings of guitars and other musical instruments.

Ronett Files For State Treasurer

Nolan Ronett, a 30 year old Austin personnel management and investment specialist, Tuesday, announced his candidacy for State Treasurer in the Democratic primary campaign.

Robnett told reporters at a Capitol news conference he would run on a platform he hopes will bring public confidence back to the State Treasurer's office. He maintained that confidence had been lost due to the incumbent's connections and operations with the Sharpstown Bank.

Robnett said he believes the Treasurer's office deserves a full time Treasurer who is at work every day managing the State Treasury. "It is widespread knowledge across Texas that the incumbent is an absentee Treasurer", said Robnett.

"One of my basic goals will be to prevent the State Treasurer's office from ever again being touched by political scandals," he said. "I promise I will go into office without any obligation to any individual or group, and I will maintain that independence while in office. I am running independently and am under obligation to no one."

Robnett said he would emphasize the need to modernize the Treasurer's office and when elected would implement modern money management techniques he estimates can save Texas taxpayers millions of dollars.

Robnett, a native of Lubbock and a personnel management graduate of Texas Tech, resigned his post with the State Program on Drug Abuse in the Texas Department of Community Affairs where he helped pioneer the State's drug abuse program. Prior to that he was in the investment business in Austin.

Get "With It" With A Hobby

How do you rate on the hobby scale? If your answer is "zero," what are you waiting for?

There are all kinds of unusual arts and crafts you can get into — and no previous experience is required!

If you groove on things of nature, try wood-carving. First stop: your local lumberyard, for a block of long-grained wood — birch. Sets of carving tools can be purchased at craft supply shops or large hardware stores.

Trace your subject lightly on the wood block. For a model menagerie everyone will love, model your collection on familiar animal characters. Pet foods offer plenty of choices — or how about "Peppy," the Wise potato chip owl? When you're ready to carve, work on an extra-steady surface — and cut deep. Scoop out details with the gouge; cut lines for effect with the veiner. Stain the wood or coat it with linseed oil when your design is complete.

For an even simpler, yet expressive, spare-time pursuit, try soap sculpture. Are model cars your "thing," or abstract structures? All you need are some cakes of white soap, a paring knife and a pointed stick to carve them into reality.

If your soap has raised lettering, remove it with the knife before you begin carving. Then use the stick to outline your design on the soap. When you've removed the excess soap and have a rough form of your subject, refine it — but be sure to cut away only small pieces each time, or else the soap will break. Use the stick or knife-edge to mark in details. It's lots of fun, and working with soap is a good introduction to other modeling materials — such as wood, plaster and clay.

Add more zest to your life by picking up on a hobby. All you need is a bit of ingenuity and some spare time to watch your creativity happen!

Dreams for sale.

Everybody's got a dream lurking around in the back of his mind. A dream vacation. A dream cottage. A dream car.

Dreams can be a lot more fun if you know you're doing something to make them come true.

And that's what the Payroll Savings Plan is all about. When you sign up an amount you specify is set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

Now Bonds mature in less than six years. That's the shortest maturity period ever, and makes Bonds a practical way to save for dreams you want to come true while you're still young enough to enjoy them.

See the folks in the payroll office where you work. They've got dreams for sale.

Now E Bonds pay 5% interest when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months. 4% the first year. Bonds are replaced if lost, stolen or destroyed. When needed they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.
